

Introduction to Course Materials

Welcome to all the students who wish to pursue a course in MA ELT, here at Netaji Subhas Open University. We congratulate you on your choice and we are sure you will not only enjoy the courses on offer but also stand to benefit from them in carving out a career for yourselves. ELT is a happening discipline, and this can take you places both domestically and internationally.

The purpose of this introduction is to familiarize you with the structure of the courses and how the course materials are packaged to be delivered to you. We understand your difficulties as a learner on the distance mode, and we try to answer most of the questions that may arise in your minds as you go through these materials. To facilitate this, you need to understand how these materials are structured and presented to you.

Each semester will have six courses and the courseware of each of these will be presented in the form of a book. To help you feel comfortable, we have attempted to maintain the design of each course similar. Occasionally, there may be a few variations that are necessitated due to the topic of discussion. Otherwise, all courses have a uniform structure.

Each course is presented in the form of a set of four modules. Each module is independent and can be read without having to read the other modules. This is in keeping with the recent thinking on curricular development - the modular curriculum. What does this mean? Each module is complete in itself. It has a set of objectives, descriptions, illustrations, and assessment questions. Therefore, you can read, understand and take the necessary tests to get grades after reading each module. However, they are also linked to the other modules and this becomes obvious as you progress.

Each module, at the beginning, helps you recall what you have studied in the previous modules and links the contents of the present module to what is discussed earlier. This helps you gain a sense of continuity to pursue the course. Like each course, each module is also designed uniformly. We will discuss it here.

Each module is sub-divided into four units. These units are additive and not modular. This means, you need to study the units in the order they appear for Unit 2 is a continuation of Unit 1, Unit 3 a continuation of Unit 2 and so on. The four units put together help you understand a topic or a concept as the case may be. How are these units structured?

Units are structured in as simple a manner as possible. Each unit begins with an outline of the topics to be discussed. This is followed by a set of objectives and some preliminary questions to assess your knowledge of the topic under discussion. The unit progresses by introducing the concepts, illustrating them with familiar examples, providing a couple of tasks or questions for you to answer so that you may monitor your progress. Often we have cross references to other units in other modules. In such cases we have taken care explain the concept briefly for immediate use. Such explanation will help you not lose track of the discussion in progress. Once you have completed reading the unit, you may go to other units which have been referred to for a deeper understanding of the concept and also relate the two units with each other. Each unit ends with a summary of the points discussed and some questions for you to answer. At the end of four units (each module) we have provided a list of reference which you may access at the time of your contact programme or in a nearby library, if you an access to one.

In the course of each unit, you will come across several self-check tasks. Please attempt each of these tasks for they help you to progress further in the unit. We have also provided answers to these self-check questions to reassure you about your progress. These questions are called formative questions. At the end of each unit, we also have some questions which help you express your understanding of the entire unit. These are summative questions. You may share the answers to these questions with your tutor in the university and seek a feedback, or share your answers with the teachers during the contact classes.

We hope this structure suits your study habits. We propose to work out a schedule and give it to you. This will help you plan your time, complete your work on time and thus achieve your degree faster than others. This schedule is suggestive (recommendatory and not mandatory) to help you plan your work properly. Often, students like you tend to postpone the work and closer to the dates of contact classes and examination, you will feel the burden of having to study all the books at one go. This will be a very difficult task, and we would not like you to land in such a situation. We are sure you appreciate this.

Let us not make this introduction a long one. It is only to set you start reading, and what you need to read lies ahead. Go ahead, and enjoy the course you have taken.

Wish you all the best
